

Daphne M. Query, Esq. Originally from Chicago, Illinois, Daphne has been practicing immigration law for twenty five years. After graduating from the University of Wisconsin in 1997 she represented migrant farmworkers with Legal Action of Wisconsin and then joined a Milwaukee employment immigration law firm representing multinationals hire foreign talent. She later moved to Miami and worked for an AV rated law firm specializing in business and family immigration until relocating to San Francisco where she represented multinational computer manufacturers, computer professionals and internet start ups in San Francisco before returning back to South Florida to open her own practice focused primarily on corporate and family immigration matters. Her practice is located in the Televisa Building near the Miami International Airport and has recently expanded to Key West, Florida. While she represents multinationals, her primary focus lately has been representing individual investors, entrepreneurs, professionals, pilots, artists and athletes obtain visas and legal permanent residency in the United States. For fifteen years she was the host of a weekly call-in immigration radio program, on Caracol Radio 1260 am. She is admitted to the 11th Circuit Courts of Appeals where she successfully argued on behalf of a deported Colombian asylum applicant that resulted in the applicant's return to the U.S. and positively impacted asylum seekers in the 11th Circuit. United States Court of Appeals, Eleventh Circuit. Ximena Sanz de Santamaria, Petitioner, v. U.S. Attorney General, Respondent No.06-16221. Decided: January 11, 2008.